TENUTA RONCI

Tenuta Ronci covers about 30 hectares on the rolling hills of the Ronci Valley of the same name, an evocative and unspoiled micro-area in the extreme south of Tuscia Viterbese, just outside Rome. The vineyards insist on tufaceous soils, of volcanic origin, rich in microelements that guarantee first to the grapes and then to the wine complexity and a great balance of taste. The agricultural and oenological project, which took shape here in the 1980s, was strongly inspired by Arturo Improta's knowledge and passion for French wines and in particular for Burgundy and Bordeaux. Hence the decision to plant grape varieties such as Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot. The evolution of Tenuta Ronci has been constant: from a small experimental winery it has transformed into a modern project, equipped with advanced technologies designed to preserve the varietal characteristics of the grapes and produce wines of the highest quality.
